freak. It will be remembered that when she gave a ball in her new house, last winter, she expressly stated on the invitation cards that she would not permit the women to stand around the room waiting meekly to be asked to dance, but expected each sex to exercise complete liberty in choosing their partners. This spring she put up beautiful stables adjoining this new house; she is a great horsewoman, and not only rides in the park every morning, but rides in the park every morning, but drives and hunts as well. When the stables were completed she discovered they had cost her more than she was quite

last year, was considered somewhat of a return to her original charm and brillian cy. It is said that "Gwen" was founded upon fact, and that the artist Reinhart was the hero of it. Literary gossips also add that the author was at one time very fond of the artist whom she had chosen for her hero, but that is only gossip. At the time the book was written Miss Howard was a handsome young woman living in the little handsome young woman living in the little Normandy village among a colony of artists, to whom she used to read the chapartists, to whom she used to read the chapters of the book as it progressed, profitting by their criticisms and comments, and transferring the scenes and incidents around her to the pages. Now, she is decidedly past her premiere jeunesse, has grown very stout and spends most of her time in Germany. She and Mrs. Ayer have always been great friends, and when the latter wished to leave her daughter in Germany for the study of languages and Germany for the study of languages and music Miss Howard gladly offered to take the child under her own special charge and take the place of mother to it. Though only twelve or thirteen years of age this child is a wonderful violinist and a very remarkable improvisatore. One day last autumn she was called upon by Miss very remarkable improvisatore. One day last autumn she was called upon by Miss Howard to play before an audience of distinguished people. The child went through half a dozen pieces of her repertoire, but said a little discontentedly when she had ned, "Those are things my teacher makes me play, but I don't care much about them myself." Some one, amused at her childish impatience, suggested that she should play them something which she herself liked, upon which she took up her violin again and held her audience spellbound for a half an hour with the beautiful strange fancies which she translated out of her own head into music.

Mrs. Garfield's Fortune. Cleveland Plaindealer: The subscription raised for Mrs. Garfield through the instrumentality of Cyrus W. Field aggregated, when invested in government bonds, about $312,000. Gen. Garfield's life was insured for $50,000, the payment of which the companies, for the sake of the extended adver-tisement it would give them, if for no other purpose, promptly made. Congress also voted her the remainder of the salary which would have been due Gen. Garfield for the first year of service as president, which amounted to $40,000. The little estate which Garfield left aggregated some $30,000. This was all that he had been able to accumulate after a life of unusual activity. This makes her total estate, in round numbers, about $450.000 in money well invested. From this an income of probshe has from congress an annual pension of $5,000, which is now voted to the widows of all ex-presidents. This fortune has not decreased since James A. Garfield's death.

Ada Rehan and Her Sister. Boston Herald: Probably no leading lived more years than she, or, with the sinactress on the American stage having as gle exception of Henry III., who succeeded many admirers as Ada Rehan is so littie known in private life. She makes few new acquaintances, and is usually seen, when not at the theatre, with Mrs. Gilbert, when fulfilling engagements out of New York. In the laiter city during the winter she lives in a pretty apartment when the same build find the same build find and Sixth avenues. In the same build find Mrs. Gilbert also has a cosy apartment where she makes her home during the winter season. Ada Rehan is the cleverest of seen each seed of "Across the Continent" fame, whose stage name is Kate Byron. She and her husband have played annual engagements in Boston for a number of years. The sensational melo-dramatic dramas they appear in have netted them very comfortable returns, all of which are safely invested in a good deal of valuable real estate at Monmount Beach, near Long Branch. A season or two ago I was visiting some friends at the sounds almost every other rottage in the immediate vicinity, occupied by some of the sounds which almost every other rottage in the immediate vicinity, occupied by some of the sounds all young lightful people I ever ming the most deal of which scoupts were all the sounds and brother or based the proximal propers of the most deal of the proximal propers of the most deal of the proximal propers of many admirers as Ada Rehan is so little of woman is superior to that of men. If no FOR THE LADIES, of woman is superior to that of men. If no such distinction be allowed in the original constitution of human nature, the superiority which can hardly be denied by any one, may be due to better education. Women have less contact with the hard side of business and the world than men. They are indoors, or merge only in the amenities of society. Much more than men they come in contact with what softens and refines the tastes and manners. Of the great redemptive system of love and sacrifice, too, woman's appreciation has ever been finer and fuller than that of the other sex. Women were among the first to recognize the spirenstitution of human nature, the superiorfuller than that of the other sex. Women were among the first to recognize the spiritual beauty and permanent excellence in the person and teaching of our Savior. The first convert to the gospel in Europe was a woman; and more than one of the rude nations were brought to Christ by the moral instinct of woman. Besides, the church affords woman a field and a work. In ages when she was shut out from almost every when she was shut out from almost every place, she found here a congenial sphere of service. The church, too brings the conso-lation she needs in the lessons of love, ten-Lady Florence Dixie, who is nothing if not eccentric and original, and who is the only woman in the United Kingdom who has ever dared speak her mind to the queen, has set all London talking by her latest from the lessons of love, tenderness and kindness; in song, and prayer and praise; in the open word and the teaching and exhortation of the pulpit. With true maternal instinct she seeks out the church, also, as the safest place for her children. With such reasons as these before us, we can easily see why more wo-men than men are found in our churches.

How Atlanta Girls Go Out Riding. Maude Andrews tells how Atlanta, Ga. girls dress to go out riding. Here is wha she saws: "I saw a pretty Atlanta girl dress for her ride the other morning, and as she donned her garments she was a rides in the park every morning, but drives and bunts as well. When the stables were completed she discovered they had cost her more than she was quite able to pay, and she therefore sent a note to each one of her acquantaneous, suggesting that they should hand in contributions sufficient to make up the deficiency. The amiable and wealthy ones laughed and sent her a five-pound note; the unamiable ones fell into a rage of the stables were paid for, and now she has set up two marble tablets were paid for, and now she has set up two marble tablets on the stable walls, the white one on the right hand containing the names of those who contributed, and the black one on the left side being inscribed with the names of those who contributed, and the black one on the left side being inscribed with the names of those who contributed, and the black one on the left side being inscribed with the names of those who contributed, and the black one on the left side being inscribed with the names of those who contributed, and the black one on the left side being inscribed with the names of those who contributed, and the black one on the left side being inscribed with the names of those who did not. A visiting American the other day called her the feer the stables are the stables and the name is thought to be a good of the stables were as of the stables were as of these who contributed, and the black one on the left side being inscribed with the names of those who contributed, and the black one on the right hand containing the names of the other day called her the grade of the stables were as of flesh-colored silk and the stables were as of the stables were as of flesh-colored silk and the stables were as of sta vision fair to look upon. Why Women Attend Church.

Zion's Herald, Boston: The Advance starts the inquiry why more women than men attend church. There are several reasons which ought to have weight in The Clear-Headedness of Youth.

should have a commission as postmistress at her West Virginia home. Her appointment was brought about by an interesting incident. There was a sharp contest for the place, and the case was hung up temporarily in a deadlock. One day a West Virginian, who knows Gen. Clarkson, called and showed him the photograph of a sweet-faced lady.

"How would she do for postmistress?" was asked.

"Would she have it?" was the reply.

"Yes," answered the caller. "She wants it."

"Well," said Gen. Clarkson, "this is the solution of the case. Send for her."
